Crisis Point | Manchester

An open-access mental health crisis centre that offers bespoke crisis management support, helping people with diverse support needs to resolve their current crisis and develop strategies to prevent or better manage future crises.

'It's a place where you arrive in a state and leave with your thoughts back together. The staff, the advice and the support are brilliant. I don't know what I would have done if I hadn't come to Crisis Point.'

What we do:

Crisis Point provides a range of bespoke services including accommodation for up to 10 nights and one-to-one sessions for people unable or unwilling to use the accommodation service, giving them the time and confidence they need to plan their own future. Without Crisis Point, about 70% of service users would require an acute hospital admission.

Who we can support:

Crisis Point accepts an individual's own definition of crisis, and recognises the crisis may be precipitated by changes in mental health, financial, occupational, domestic or social circumstances, or any combination of these factors.

Our services include:

Helping you develop skills to resolve your own crisis and to manage future crises.

We offer specific therapeutic interventions on-site, such as Neuro-Linguistic Programming (NLP), Hypnotherapy, Relaxation and Mindfulness techniques, as well as leisure activities and 1:1 work.

Signposting to longer-term support services.

How to refer:

You can refer yourself, or be referred via an agency.

Once we have completed a referral form we will carry out an initial assessment to ensure we provide you with the service you need.

Some people choose to leave The Sanctuary once their initial crisis has passed and they have been able to calm down; others may need to stay longer.

'Just knowing that the Sanctuary is there is important to me. I know the right help is there when I need it, where as in the past I'd struggle to cope every night.'

MADDchester | Manchester Region Attention Deficit Disorder Group

All are welcome – friends, relatives, partners and especially the undiagnosed (we all started out undiagnosed so know what's what).

The format is simple – there are no rules, no charges, no notes taken – you show up (we aren't bothered if you turn up at your leisure) and ask anything you want, there's usually someone with relevant experience. You don't even have to talk about ADHD – it's completely open.

And we're friendly. ADHDers tend to be friendly and non-judgemental (who are we to judge?) and everyone had to come to a first meet, so we know what that feels like, so we're very welcoming.

Manchester Mind Cafe

[Zion Centre Cafe]

We aim to promote positive mental wellbeing through the food we serve and the atmosphere we have created. We are passionate about shared eating and encouraging openness, to combat social isolation and loneliness, all done over plates of delicious and affordable food.

We also feel strongly about promoting environmental wellbeing. We largely use surplus food stock that would otherwise be wasted. We are conscious of using environmentally friendly and sustainable packaging and endeavour that any leftover meals are available for people to take away, providing an additional healthy meal for those who may be unable to put together such meals themselves.

Pay What You Can lunch sessions on Fridays - aimed at those experiencing food poverty.

We champion Meat-free Mondays and always have at least one vegetarian or vegan option on the menu. We know that evidence suggests a link between good mental health and food and so we make sure our meals are packed full of lovely fruit and vegetables, all sourced as locally as possible.

Overall, our vision is to bring people together sharing food and to improve the wellbeing of Manchester residents through good, nutritious food.

The International Hearing Voices Network

Because hearing voices is a much stigmatised experience we wanted to create a safe place where you can find out more about hearing voices and to create an interactive online community where you can let us know about your point of view or experience.

We've put together the most extensive international resource on hearing voices you can find on the web. This information includes both ways of overcoming the difficulties faced by people who hear voices, as well as the more positive aspects of the experience and its cultural and historical significance.

We understand "voices" to be real and meaningful, something that is experienced by a significant minority of people, including many who have no problems living with their voices. Our research shows that to hear voices is not the consequence of a diseased brain, but more akin to a variation in human behaviour, like being left-handed. It is not so much the voices that are the problem, but the difficulties that some people have in coping with them.

Manchester Hearing Voices Group

Fridays: 13:30 - 15:00

The group is free to attend and open to anyone who hears voices, see visions or have other unusual sensory experiences. It's friendly and everyone who attends goes out of their way to help people feel at ease. The group welcomes people whether or not they have a diagnosis, and members may also have other issues that they are struggling with (including unusual beliefs, self-harm and bipolar).

They are able to offer one to one support before or after the group if members prefer, so they can feel more at ease when they choose to attend the group.

Green Time: Nature Therapy for ADHD Children & Adults

'Children with ADHD who play regularly in green play settings have milder symptoms than children who play in built outdoor and indoor settings. This is true for all income groups and for both boys and girls. Interestingly, for hyperactive children, the apparent advantage of green spaces is true only for relatively open green settings.

Conclusions: These and previous findings collectively suggest that it is time for randomised clinical trials testing the impacts of regular exposure to greenspace as a treatment for ADHD.'

From 2011 study 'Could Exposure to Everyday Green Spaces Help Treat ADHD? Evidence from Children's Play Settings'

Connecting with Nature Offers New Approach to Mental Health

A report published in February 2016 shows that taking part in nature-based activities helps people who are suffering from mental ill-health and can contribute to a reduction in levels of anxiety, stress and depression.

The report, 'A review of nature-based interventions for mental health care' [also called Ecotherapy or Nature Therapy] suggests making greater use of green care to help people suffering from mental ill-health. The new review was commissioned by Natural England from the University of Essex and Mind, the UK's leading mental health charity.

Incredible Edible Manchester

Our vision is to create kind, confident and connected communities through the power of food. We live in communities that are often disconnected. If communities connect together and believe in their potential, people start to do good, kind and loving things in the world around them.

From its inception, Incredible Edible sought to show how ordinary people can transform their own landscapes and turned disused plots into abundant sources of healthy food.

Forever Manchester | Start your own local community project

With a better understanding of the untapped community resources available in a neighbourhood, we then encourage the community to come together to create exciting new projects together. Building on the new connections between individuals, existing groups and organisations, and with a little support from us, amazing new projects are created and help to build an even stronger and more thriving community.

We encourage people to identify and share what fantastic resources exist within a community to support their new group, e.g. a new gardening project might be able to put a call out in the local community for any garden tools that people are willing to share or donate, or see if people are willing to come and lend a hand to get some land cleared without the need for expensive equipment.

We can also support new and existing groups with small amounts of funding up to £250 with our Cash 4 Graft awards. Details of these can be found here on our website.
